Continuing our program in management efficiency. This program includes efforts at both cost-containment and cost-avoidance.

Dr. LeMaistre noted that many of these ideas for the future are non-traditional ways of doing business at public universities, but that M. D. Anderson's unique position as both a research center and world-class hospital requires innovative approaches if it is to be successful in the future.

Also required, Dr. LeMaistre said, will be the involvement of all employees.

"The strength on which M. D. Anderson always has rested is its inter-dependency and collaboration," he said. "By working
